The Supreme Court vs The People

KARL MARX INFLUENCE INCREASES

This article concerns Secretary of Labor, Arthur J. Goldberg, who was appointed by President John F. Kennedy, to the United States Supreme Court. In my opinion, this was a huge error, which will be evidenced by the information I herewith submit.

The National Religion and Labor Foundation was set up in 1932 at the instigation of the late Sidney Hillman (an identified communist), which membership was composed of Marxian and Fabian Socialists, for the purpose of giving prestige of the church movement to the labor organizing hierarchy. Its letter-head carried about 50 names of Marxists, Socialists and Communists. It was forty-five members of this movement that signed a letter addressed to the late Franklin D. Roosevelt (at his invitation) in November 1935, urging him (according to the New York Herald Tribune) "to socialize the country's resources, nationalize its basic industries, and build an inclusive union movement."

According to the FBI and the HCUA, the NRLF was "one of the most vicious communist organizations ever set up in this country."

It won considerable notoriety by publishing on the cover of its official organ, "Economic Justice," Nov. 1932, a "wanted" circular which pictured Christ as an escaped criminal and implied by its text that every communist agitator was akin to Jesus Christ (See page 2). It read:

"Reward for information leading to the apprehension of Jesus Christ, who is wanted for sedition, criminal anarchy, vagrancy, and conspiracy to overthrow the established government."

Among the NRLF's members were: Sidney Hillman, Abraham Muste, Robert Weaver, (Appointed by Kennedy as Federal Housing and Home Finance Administrator), Arthur J. Goldberg, Claude Williams, and others, too numerous to list.

Their records are as follows:

All members of the National Committee of the National Religion and Labor Foundation have pro-communist records, some as many as 90 communist-front citations.

Sidney Hillman (born Schmucl Gilman), a Russian Rabbi with a long record of revolutionary activities in Russia and U.S.; organizer of NRLC; member, National Labor Advisory Board (under Roosevelt); member, Progressive Conference; director, Garland Fund; director, Russian-American Industrial Corporation; director, American Civil Liberties Union; member, Farmer Labor Party; pres., Amalgamated Clothing Workers; member, International League for Peace; member, Labor's Non-Partisan League; and other Socialist groups.

Arthur J. Goldberg, a member of a group whose executive head is an identified communist; member, Congress for Racial Equality; member, Fund for the Republic; was general counsel for the CIO; acted as counsel for the AFL and the UAW.

Abraham J. Muste, was executive-head of the Trotskyite communists; member, National Committee of the American Council Committee on Militarism in Education;

Arthur J. Goldberg, has never so much as held a police court judge position, now has been appointed to the Supreme Court to take the place of Felix Frankfurter, representing the minority group.

chairman, Conference for Progressive Labor Action; vice-president, Labor Age; member, Executive Committee, League for Independent Political Action; member, National Council, League for Industrial Democracy (formerly Inter-Collegiate Socialist Society); vice-president, Pioneer Youth of America; member, National Committee, War Resisters League; contributing editor, World Tomorrow; vice-chairman, Fellowship of Reconciliation; member, Committee on Labor Injunctions; member, New York Committee for Progressive Miners Relief; representative, Conference for Progressive Labor Action in Continental Congress for Economic Reconstruction; member, United States Congress Against War; executive-head of Brookwood College, Katonah, N. Y.

Robert C. Weaver, served under F.D.R.; chairman, NAACP; member, Council on African Affairs; member, National Citizens Political Committee; member, Negro Congress; member, Negro People's Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy; member, Social Work To-Day Co-operators; and other Left-wing groups.

Claude C. Williams is a director of Commonwealth College, Mena, Arkansas; headed the People's Institute of Applied Religion; and belongs to many Leftist groups.

COMMON SENSE does not publish this expose of Arthur Goldberg believing we can prevent his confirmation. Thirty-years research convinces us that if we could prove without a doubt he or any other Jew was a card-carrying communist, Congress would not have the courage to stop him. The familiar cry of anti-Semitic would reverberate through Washington. When Felix Frankfurter was up for confirmation, his red record was exposed and Senators were fighting him, Dean Acheson, Frankfurter's attorney, called Bernard Baruch to the stand; all that was necessary was for Baruch to say: "Oh I don't think he is a communist." Thousands thought he was, but a prominent Jew gave his OK.

When Anna Rosenberg was up for confirmation in 1950 as Ass't Sec'y. of Defense, Ralph DeSola (a former communist) under oath looked her in the eye and told her he had attended several communist meetings with her and talked with her at the meetings. The Jews had every prominent non-Jew they controlled in companies they owned wire the Armed Services Committee. She went in and directed the hiring of over a million in 115 departments. Communists were packed in. When Senator Joseph McCarthy started to dig them out, they crucified him.

COMMUNIST BACKGROUND OF NRLF

As for those readers who entertain any doubts about the communist background of the National Religion and Labor Foundation, we quote a paragraph from Robert Whitaker's article which appeared in the same issue of Economic Justice which featured the cartoon of Christ as a hunted criminal. The author, considered leader of Los Angeles communists, is also a national committeeman of the NRLF, and a regular correspondent of the Bulletin. Consequently, his words carry considerable weight when he says:

"It is no longer a question of the need of a revolution; the question is as to the method of bringing the revolution to pass . . .

To this conclusion I have very definitely come: that there is little hope of making any considerable change in the psychology of the masses except as the sequence of RADICAL SOCIAL ACTION OUTSIDE OF RESPECTABLE RANKS.

Consequently our concern is to build the understanding leadership for the crisis from those who need no longer the milk of infantile adaptations to their timidities and polite prejudices but are ready to talk business and digest the strong meat of DIRECT REVOLUTIONARY PREPARATION." (i. m.)

We also recommend James W. Ford's article which appeared in the May-June issue of 1933, entitled Communism Is The Way. The Negro author was Vice Presidential Candidate on the Communist Party ticket in 1932, headed by William Z. Foster.
